

Boxing Day Never Comes

Christmas Day keeps restarting. Only the fridge remembers.

CHRISTMAS

THE STORY

It is 25 December 2016 at 7 Holly Close, and you are the new neighbours from No. 14, invited round for Christmas dinner. Every time the crackers bang at 3 p.m., the day snaps back to 7 a.m. The Hartleys don't notice. You do.

Each loop, the house changes a little more, and whatever you found last time is gone. The only thing that carries over is the fridge, where your team pins its notes. Players split up across the lounge, the kitchen and the attic, describe what they see, and piece it together out loud. Nobody gets out alone, and most of the game happens in conversation.

It is a warm, funny family Christmas with a heavy dose of 2016 nostalgia: paper chains, patterned carpets, a sold-out toy and a gran who writes everything in fountain pen. No horror, no outside knowledge needed, and it plays well on any video call for teams of 4 to 10.
